Western homes need Extension Telephones

Today, when one's friends may call by telephone at any hour or minute, a single instrument central to every room but actually convenient to none is not considered true telephone convenience.

This typical one-story western home has three telephones at a cost of but a few cents a day. They are beside the easy chair, at the bedside, and in the kitchen.

Mitchell wrote practically all of the special song numbers for the late Nora Bayes.

Frivolous, Fiery, French Is New McAvoy Comedy

"Stolen Kisses," Warner Bros. Vitaphone production which comes to the Torrance Theatre, Sunday and Monday, with May McAvoy in the starring role, is one of the most delicious comedies of the season. There are complications galore, and a series of situations which bring to the utmost embarrassment and to the audience's amusement and hilarity.

The story takes the characters to Paris and the famous Bergeres, where the gay atmosphere only serves to increase the troubles of the dainty May and her husband, Hallam Cooley. The scenes where Hal and his crusty father, Claude Gillingwater, are enticed on the stage by the company of ravishing chorus girls, are gems of humorous action.

The company of players in "Stolen Kisses" includes, in addition to those mentioned, Reed Howes, Arthur Hoyt, Edna Murphy, Agnes Franey and Phyllis Crane.

Rely Enright directed. The story was written by Franz Suppe and was adapted for the screen by E. T. Lowe, Jr.

Joseph Henabery directed Saturday is a silent film, "Thunder," and augmented by "Dancing Around," an all-talking picture.

An interesting story concerns itself with the placing of Ann Harding's name to a Pathé contract, and her selection for the featured role of "Paris Bound" as her first all-talking film.

Tired from strenuous work on the New York stage over a period of several years, the Broadway star came to California for a rest. Tentative plans for her next stage season had already been completed before Miss Harding left New York.
